Prologue

It was the first day of my humiliation. Put on my home, to England, set up with a temporary rental in 50 The flat was on the eighth floor, the windows looked over ground. It had been chosen, I think, because of the blocked all inquiries. I stayed indoors. The pho wall rang and rang, but I was warned not to an my own phone switched off. I watched the crick game I don't understand, it offered no real distr was better than looking at the interior of that apar condo, in which everything had been designed to be tral, with all significant corners rounded, like an (P the cricket finished I stared at the sleek coffee machi in the wall, and at two photos of the Buddha—one a br the other wood—and at a photo of an elephant kneel little Indian boy, who was also kneeling. The rooms and gray, linked by a pristine hallway of tan wool co the ridges in the cord.
Two days passed like that. On the third day, the doo up and said the lobby was clear. I looked at my phone, it wa on the counter in airplane mode. I had been offline for seven hours and can remember feeling that this should be counted am the great examples of personal stoicism and moral endurance of our
