AMEC buying rival for $3.2 billion

LONDON

Foster Wheeler purchase would allow it to expand engineering services

BY CHRIS BIRCH

AMEC, the British engineering and project management company, said it has agreed to buy rival Foster Wheeler, which it says will allow it to expand its services into the oil and gas sector, power, mining and infrastructure.

AMEC said the deal with the firm, which is based in the US, would allow it to expand its services into the oil and gas sector, power, mining and infrastructure.
